

It's best wishes and farewell for the P.7 Pupils

The past six years for most of the Primary Seven pupils seem to have flown by quickly.

For the teachers, it is yet another sad farewell to the children they had grown to love and relate with like family.

With the national Primary Leaving Examinations (P.L.E) around the corner, the pupils are reading extra hard to compete nationally for the best grades so they can be admitted in some of the best government owned secondary schools in the country.

Their teachers have been supportive.

In preparation for the examinations, the school staff conducted extra classes and revision tests.

As a send off, the School organized a P.7 leavers' picnic at the school hall.

The teachers encouraged the students to do their best in the forthcoming examinations and choose careers in life that will make them the people they have always wanted to be.

Finally, the pupils read their farewell messages to their class teachers and promised to do their best in the forthcoming exams.

From the headmaster's desk

With less than a month to end the term, my greatest gratitude goes out to the teaching staff who worked extra hard during this term; where we had our candidate class sit for their national examinations and the other classes sit for their end of year examination that determine whether the pupils progress to another class or repeat their current class.

We are also grateful to MIFUMI and Volunteers who have been there when we need them.

Special thanks go out to John Roberts who has returned every third term for the last eight years to teach English and to Rachael Burke for helping out our pupils in mathematics and algebra.

I would also like to thank all the parents who made sure their children came to school each day.

As the children come home, please encourage them to read.

Happy holidays.

The Music Festival is on!

Now that the year is ending with the longest holiday around the corner, every body is in a festive mood.

In MIFUMI Primary School, the holidays start here with the end of year school Music festival.

First, all the pupils get to know the two houses they will compete in; The two houses are blue and yellow.

The house master and mistress organize and prepare their members to compete on following categories; Dance, sight-singing, set piece, traditional folk songs, original composition, creative dance, drama and speeches.

While the lower primary classes (P.1-P.4) have fun and enjoy the day, the upper primary classes are tested on skill and knowledge.

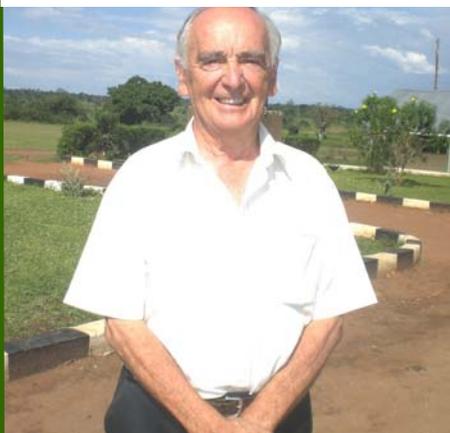

The overall winning house walks away with a trophy.

For most of the children, there are no winners and losers team.

They love this musical send off at the end of every year because they get to do something out of class with their teachers and other pupils.

In Tororo, one would wonder why someone with this rich educational background would return each year at around the same time to a life so basic to teach in a village so remote.

Mr. John Roberts says;

“I love working with children and enjoy teaching.”

John was touched by the yearning and curiosity of these children that made them walk miles just to be in school. So he chose to share one of his assets; knowledge.

When the Director Health and Education, Glyn Turner invited John Roberts to MIFUMI in 2001 to come and prepare a report for the trustees of charity and the then school management committee, he did not know that John Roberts would become one of the benefactors of this school and faithfully return each year to voluntarily prepare pupils for their final yearly examinations.

In the UK, among friends and family, John Roberts raised money to provide resources for the school.

This year with the money he raised, a laptop was purchased for the headmaster and a computer for the school.

Because of the irregular hydro-power supply, John Roberts intends to set up solar panel for the school in the near future.

According to the headmaster of the school Mr. Bernard Onyango, ‘He is a blessing that has come at the right time’
